the heart out of the mystery of "Hamlet." Theories of the character are as various as the disportions of their innumerable au-Papular Science Monthly in an article on Impediment of Adipose," has given us alto-gather a new "Hamlet;", and so cleverly has the portrait peen painted that a host of conrents will expouse the cause of this writer and descures henceforth all representations of the Danish prince which do not accord with it. In the expression, "he's fat and cant of breath," this griter finds the key note of the character of Hamlet. The prometination of the prince has been the subject of countless volumes, but we have here in latef space the simple explanati hat he was the victim of chronic issluess, the result of faity degeneration." It is an in-genious theory; and yet it is supported by so many passages of the play that the wonder really is that it has never been hit on before. The fine spirit of Hamlet is "impresented in Like men of his stamp to he met wah every day, he relieved h maelf by talking. The mind de Hamlet is clogged, everyone will admit; and why may it not be his coesits and not mental derangement, the nade him at times "duller than the fat would that rote Real at ease on Lethe's wharf?"

ipon as very important, and the whole party ought to be present and select the very bes men to the county convention men who are ndent of cliques and ringsfers, but who will present as candidates the names of men who are known to possess the qualifications of honesty and ability. Time was when con-ventions out diely upon the party support for almost any licket they could nominate, out in local elections a large share of the mere fact that the cardidate belongs to the party with which they have generally effiliatd and consider filness and integrity as imtant as party records or party feelty. Hence primaries or county sandidates ought to be conducted not with reference to the subserving of party ends; but that the bast men for the various offices be chosen. It is by, no means, deposits to go outside of the party to inclinate account y or go dutation of the party of find these fit men i In this county fair deal-ing in the convention will insure a republi-can victory by several hundred, and will add analyzially to the support of the state tioket.

The people of the third judicia, district have long known Judge Boise and they are mot likely to elect a new man to the position which he has so long and so acceptably filled Mr. Bambey, in point of natural ability or o impurisely and integrity on the seach has never been questioned. Demo-crate journals in the district have currenvored to make capital against Judge Boise from the fact, as alleged, that he had promised some moreme julge. He was not at the conven tion, took no part in its proceedings, dictated took of its nominations, but was selected by the delegates of the third district by a considerable majority, and, as intimated by The Okasonian at the time, though the supreme bench would have been honored by Judge Bolse's election as a member of it, he third i udicial district is formoute that he was left to fall the place of circuit judge in that dis-

A says: "The opposition to him is tosing strength and instead of crystallizing about some able and respectable statesman. is allowly but certainly disappearing. The plain truth is opposition to Mr. Tilden has no ground now to stand on." There can be no doubt the the action of the New York and Peousylvan's democratic conventions, par ticularly he former, gave a decided impetus to the Titlen boom, which has been still further acotterated by Speaker Randall's authornative aunouncement that he, Tilden, is a candidate. But he is very far from being the coanimous choice of his party, and his nomination, if made, will be very distanteful to a large number of democrats. And yet what other democratic candidate would be on the whole so strong and formidable?

YE JOLLY OLD TIME

Washington Society in Jackson's Time

Manhington Society in Jackson's Time [Adants Monthly]. In former years, the wildest gentlemen used to spend their evenings in decreasily playing whist, with frigal suppers of broiled oysters, tread and cheese, and a glass or two of Maceira. The rollicking Jackson men substituted poker for whist, and indulged in frequent libations of whisty, while their supper tables were graced—according to the season—with a baked raccoon garmished with fried sweet potatoes, or canvas-back, ducks, or shad bout of before a bickory fire on an oak board. Plantation tobacco was freely smoked in pipes, but few, except the members of the diplomatic corps, indulged in organs As sembliss were held once a week between Christians Day and Ash Wedinosday, to which all of the respectable ladies in the city who danced were fivited. It was also customers all of the respectable ladies in the city who denoted were invited. It was also customary for those of the cabinet officers and other high and contra dances. Those who did not dance and correst angres. Those who did not dance showed their way through the criwd conversing with negliaintances, and the mer frequently taking another glass of punch. At 10 the guests were unvited to the supper table, which was often on the pride back porch which every Washington house had in those lays. The table was always loaded with quidences of the onlinery skill of the lady of the house. There was a reast ham at one and, a saddle of remains or mustion at the other and some reasted poultry or wild ducks midway a great variety of home-baked cakes was a bource of pride, and there was never any lack of punch with de canters of Madeira. The devolunts gave champagine, but it was seldom seen axcept at the legations, At 11 there was a general exodus, and after the neural scramble for hate, clocks and overshoes the guests entered their carrages. Some ames a few intimate french of the houses langured to cupy a contra cance or to take a parting druck of punch, but by midnight in last guest departed, and the servine began to blow out the candles with which the house had been illuminated.

Richers-In-taw in New Guines.

[Ricm the May International Review]

Among the Icelanders, marrages are not made according to the inclination or by the free chine of the young people, but at the wish o their families, who consult their convenience alone when they affiance their children, most frequently at a very tender age. When the arrangement is completed, the betrothed are forbuden to associate with each other. The siquetic which regulates the affini is very rigorous, and presses heavily agon the hitle famous. They are forbidden to look as each other, and it is enjoined upon the twing famous. They are forbidden to look as each other on the road—an accident which sunct full to occur occanically—the gril was rarely goes out alone, being warned by her companions, is bound to keep herself hidden behind a tree or bushes from the time that has fusine ford and master comes in sight till is has passed by It happens often that the two are of the same company—for instance, when they cross from one island to another in the same book. Then the othid-like and ample courtesy which gives the law in these regions, demands that they rum their backs, and look steadfastly, in opposite directions. The betrothed must also avoid all contact with the members, both masculine and fersining, by the family into which they are about to enter. From the future father. sponter with the members, both masculines and featurine, of the family into which they are about to enter. From the future father-law they must grand the fature mother-law they must grand themselves as from the plague. One day when Mr. Van Hasselt was in his school, one of the boys suddenly threw him self sader the table, where he remained motionees. Not knowing what to think, the fright end teacher was rushing to the, child, who in is comrades called him back. "It is nothing," they said, only his prother's future mother-in law is going by Thurlow Wood on Grant's Candidacy. Thur ow Weed wrote a letter in reply to an invitation to attend the antithird term convenion at 8t. Loung, approving the move ment but declining to attend on account of age and infarmities. He expressed in views on the bird term question with great rule. age and infirmities. He expresses he newson the bird term question with great frankness. The infinences that will enforce for Grant a, no mination, should good a nomination be in de, will insure his differ. The prematers call of our state convention could will have been appointed randered the success of our ticket at least doubtful. If delegates thus chosen here act with delegates from states sure to cast their electrations against Grant his defeat in this state becomes inevitable. Will our republican freads in states fished for democracy if reasonably admonshed deliberately involve hemselves with us in a common calculty.
